Seyievino Angami, a 62-year-old widow, lives with her widowed daughter and her two adolescent children. She did not have enough resources to support her family and lacked confidence to face any emergency situation. Her daughter takes on temporary jobs like selling clothes or vegetables. The two women fought the adversities together to ensure smooth running of the household. Their house had two rooms, one was shared by her grandsons and the other was shared between her daughter and herself.

With the help of Dimapur Municipal Corporation, Seyievino became a beneficiary under Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojana (Urban) [PMAY(U)]. Her family got the much needed confidence to build their own pucca house. Now the family of four resides in a permanent house. She feels that the house has brought safety and security in the lives of the two single women. Further, it has provided her grandchildren with separate rooms, impacting their education positively. Seyievino is thankful to the Mission for providing her the confidence and financial assistance.

A home of her own has earned Seyievino a new found social recognition and respect. "Relatives, friends and neighbours would sympathise with me for my struggles. Now that I have a permanent, dignified house of my own, they look at me with much more respect."
